For Sweet Charity.

A literary club of thirty members wished to make some money for a special charity, so they devised and carried out this very clever scheme. Thirty baskets were purchased at wholesale, and each lady took one and filled it with the most delicious supper that she could prepare. Her card was placed inside and the top covered with tissue paper, then tied down with ribbon. Invitations were sent to thirty men, asking them to come to an "auction supper" on such an eve-Her card was placed inside and the top covered with itssue paper, then lied down with ribbon. Invitations were sent to thirty men, asking them to come to an "auction supper" on such an ever ming, styling the address and hour. A Quaker Tea Party.

A jolly set of girls were deploring the dilapidated condition of their wardrobes, after the summer at various resorts, and were wondering how they could get ready for an "afternoon" for a strange girl whom they wished to do a strange girl whom they wished to do special honor. They solved the problem by issuing invitations for a "Quaker tea party." The guests were asked to come attired as "Quaker-esses." All persons were to be addressed by their first names and there would be a penalty imposed if the pronouns "thee" and "thou" were not used exclusively. It is needless to say would be a penalty imposed if the pronouns "thee" and "thou" were not used exclusively. It is needless to say that it was a most enjoyable afternoon, and the girls looked so bewitching in their plain skirts, snowy kerchiefs and simply dressed hair, that some of the men who "just dropped in," said they wished that style night become the fashen. These wholesome refreshments were served, gold banded white china and perfectly plain silver spoons being used: Chicken saind, tiny hot bisoult, custard in old-fashioned glasses, with brown crusty sponge cake, tea and coffee.

In speaking of Thanksgiving, one naturally thinks of the dinner; the menu given below is simple in character for a family affair with the children at the table;
